Short profile of the Organisation:

The University of Social Sciences (Społeczna Akademia Nauk) is one of the largest private universities in Poland. It was established in 1994 and is located in 15 cities in Poland and in London, UK. The main campus is located in Łódź, but the studies are offered also in the biggest cities in Poland – Warsaw and Kraków . The University offers education on undergraduate, graduate, MBA and PhD levels, as well as an opportunity to finish an American Master degree program with Clark University (USA). The University has currently 18 000 students.

The University is the organizer of yearly international scientific conferences, such as: Intercultural Management Congress, Agile-Commerce Conference, Family Business Conference or Entrepreneurship and Innovation Conference. Apart from yearly events there are one-time conferences organized regularly by the University departments, for example: “Healthcare Management Challenges”, “Financing of Healthcare”, “Finance and Accountancy latest developments”, “Diversity – management in new era” and others addressing current interests and issues requiring scientific discussions.

The University’s faculty are involved in research in all disciplines where the studies are offered. The most active research teams include those focusing on: Management, Healthcare, Finance and Accounting, Sociology, English Philology, Pedagogy, Psychology, Computer Science, International Relations. The research teams that are looking for partners to apply for international scientific grants are working on such topics as: Citizen science, Responsible Research and Innovation, Public Engagement, Higher Education Management, Quality culture in HEI, Evaluation methods, Internationalization of HEI, Intercultural Communication, Family Businesses, Project Management or Healthcare management.

Since 1999 the University runs its own publishing house which supports the researchers in preparing and publishing their articles, monographs and books. Due to the long experience in participating in various international projects, the University faculty and administration are very professional in international cooperation and make excellent partners in terms of scientific performance, collaboration, communication and organizational skills.
